

Abstract: In this talk we will discuss about various cryptanalysis techniques, including differential and boomerang attacks, and highlight the difficulties related to the search of the best parameters against a given primitive. We will explain how to solve those difficulties, by describing some algorithms as well as modelisation techniques to rely on generic solvers. In particular we will focus on MILP models for cryptographic problems and show how to construct efficient ones.